

OPEN LECTURES

in

Teaching & Learning

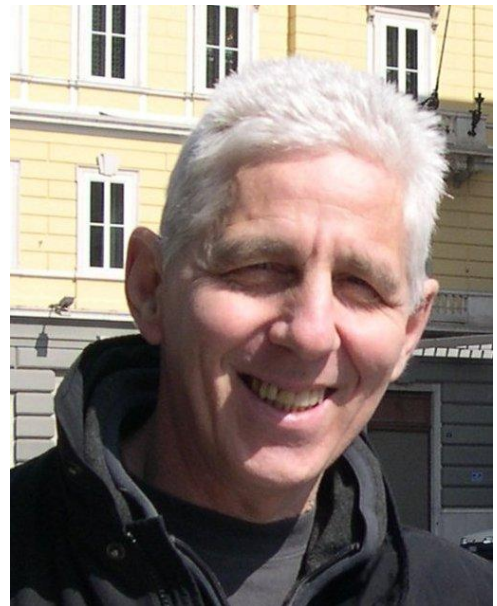

Wednesday, 27th April 2011, from 5pm, in Lecture room 080, Queen Anne Court, Greenwich Maritime Campus, Greenwich.

Speaker: David Nicol, Professor of Higher Education, University of Strathclyde

Topic: Feedback in HE: misconstrued and misaligned

David will discuss the misalignment of much feedback practice in higher education, which invariably focuses on the quality of feedback delivery rather than on the quality of feedback construction. He will provide a rationale for the enhancement of peer feedback opportunities and will propose some principles of good peer feedback practice.

David has an international profile in research on assessment and feedback. He led the £1m REAP project and is now leading the PEER project. His website, www.reap.ac.uk provides a range of resources for those wishing to enhance practice. David collaborates with researchers in Spain, Australia and the UK on these topics.

This is the last OPEN LECTURE in the 2010-2011 series. Watch for the 2011-2012 series.

2011 Learning and Teaching Conferences at the University of Greenwich

Monday 4 July: Promoting Inclusive Change: addressing equity and success for BME students in HE.
Tuesday 5 July: Redefining the Student Experience: Directions for learning, teaching and assessment.
Wednesday 6 July: Enhanced and Transformed: Tales from the Digital Age..